Sleepless Nights

"For nearly a month I was not able to sleep, but after using PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND for two days, insomnia fled and strength returned."
E. G. SMITH, Claussen, S. C.

"I have taken only a part of a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and it has entirely relieved me of sleeplessness, from which I have suffered greatly.
MRS. E. AUTCLIFF, Peoria, Ill.

"For a long time I was so nervous and worn out that I could not work. I tried many medicines, but none gave me relief until I used Paine's Celery Compound, which at once strengthened and invigorated my nerves."
HARRY SHERMAN, Burlington, Vt.

Paine's Celery Compound

quickly quiets and strengthens the nerves, when irritated or weakened by overwork, excesses, disease, or shock. It cures nervousness, headache, dyspepsia, sleeplessness, melancholia, and other disorders of the nervous system.

Tones up the Shattered Nerves

"For two years I was a sufferer from nervous debility, and I thank God and the discoverer of the valuable remedy, that Paine's Celery Compound cured me. Let any one write to me for advice."
GEORGE W. BOUTON, Stamford, Conn.

Paine's Celery Compound produces sound and refreshing sleep. A physician's prescription, it does not contain one harmful drug. Like nothing else, it is a guaranteed cure for sleeplessness, if directions are faithfully followed. $1.00. Six for $5.00. Druggists.

MORAL DEAFNESS.

How One Woman Didn't Hear Stories of a Scandalous Nature.

Physical deafness is an affliction; moral deafness is a blessing, says the Youth's Companion. "I was so embarrassed at Mrs Chase's the other day," said a young girl. "I told her that story about Belle Gardner's being jilted and refusing to give up her engagement ring, and when I had finished all she said was: 'Do you know where the sewing circle meets this week?'"

Mrs. Chase, of whom the story was told, was a wise woman; she had discovered early in life that there are some gossips and scandal-mongers who can not be suppressed by polite means, but whose disagreeable stock in trade must be pointedly ignored. Therefore, when a malicious story was mentioned in her presence she became conveniently deaf.

One day a woman much older than herself, whom she would have treated with respect, confided to her a choice bit of social scandal. Mrs. Chase impassively sewed on and said nothing.

"Well, what do you think of it, my dear?" asked the tale-bearer, impatiently. "Ought they not to be ashamed to live in the style they do when they actually haven't enough to pay their debts?"

Mrs. Chase held up her work and gazed at it in absorbed interest.

"Now would you make that rose white or pink?" she asked, innocently.

"Don't try to change the subject," retorted the other. "If you don't want to express an opinion you needn't, but you can say any thing to me, you know. I shan't repeat it."

"Do you know," said Mrs. Chase, in an apparent burst of confidence, "I really did not hear a word you said! Years ago I began the practice of trying to think of something else as soon as people attempt to gossip, and I've succeeded so well that now I can really make myself stone deaf to what I ought not hear."

The recipient of this confidence was as a matter of course offended, but she had learned her lesson; never again did she pour unwelcome news into those deaf ears.

TWO WITTY REPLIES.

How Pettigrew, the Famous Lawyer, Got Even with a Judge.

I have heard, says the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Record, two good stories of Pettigrew, of South Carolina, the great lawyer and Unionist. He was practicing at one time before a judge who was a Presbyterian of the straightest sect and a very hard-working officer. It came to be Maunday-Thursday and Pettigrew and the Episcopalians and Roman Catholics thought they would like an adjournment of court over Good Friday. Pettigrew was selected to make the motion. "Your honor," he said, "I desire to move that the court adjourn over to-morrow." "Why should the court adjourn over to-morrow when the docket is so crowded?" asked the judge. "Because," said Pettigrew, "to-morrow is Good Friday and some of us would like to go to church." "No," said the judge, decidedly, after a moment's thought, "the court will sit to-morrow as usual." "Very well, your honor," replied Pettigrew, adding as he turned away, "I know there is a precedent, for Pontius Pilate held court on the first Good Friday." The same judge was a great stickler for etiquette, and when one hot July day Pettigrew came into the court-room in a black coat and yellow nankeen trousers the judge took him sternly to task, asking him whether he did not know that the rules of that court required its counselors to appear in "black coat and trousers." "Well, your honor," said Pettigrew, innocently, "I submit that I am within the rule, for I have on a black coat and trousers." "But they're not black trousers," insisted the Judge; "black coat and trousers means that both shall be black." "Then," said Pettigrew, "I call your honor's attention to the fact that the sheriff of this court is in contempt of its rules, for they require him to attend upon its sessions in a cocked hat and sword, and while his hat seems to be cocked, his sword certainly is not." The judge said no more about the trousers.

Raising the Dead.

Dr. Lackersteen, in a provisional communication to the Medical Standard, gives the details of three cases of resuscitation from collapse by the use of subcutaneous injections of nitro-glycerine. One of these was the case of a young lady apparently drowned; every effort toward resuscitation had been made by the physicians in attendance for upward of an hour, at the end of which time she was found lying on her back, pale, limp, cold, sodden and apparently lifeless. Dr. L. injected four minims of nitro-glycerine over the pit of the stomach. Within three minutes evidences of life were apparent, and the subsequent use of atropine restored warmth and respiration, and she subsequently made a complete recovery. The other cases are equally striking.

Never Lights His Cigar.

Senator Bate, of Tennessee, has a peculiarity in that he invariably appears with a cigar in his mouth, but no one here has yet seen him smoking. While he used to be an inveterate smoker, for the last twenty years he has never lighted a cigar. Conversing with some of his Senatorial friends he told them the story. In a battle during the late war Senator Bate and his brother, Colonel Bate, were together. They were in conversation, when the Senator drew from his pocket a cigar, and struck a match with which to light it. As he did so a cannon ball tore his brother's head completely from his body. The cigar was not lighted, and to this day he has never lighted one, and probably never will.

LIFE IN A SHOE-STORE.

Women Will Have Pretty and Tight-Fitting Shoes.

Some of the Whims That Ladies Have with Reference to Their Foot-Gear—Why None But Sweet-Tempered Men Should Sell Shoes.

"A man in the shoe business dies twenty years before his time," said a white-haired shoe-dealer in one of the up-town retail stores to a New York Sun reporter. "It is the hardest business there is. If a lady wants a bonnet she buys one she can get on and not hurt her head, but if she wants a shoe she tries on every one in the store, and then limps out in a pair two sizes too small, and scolds and says we have not good-shaped shoes, because they hurt her feet. It is a trying business. A man does not live out half his days."

"Yes, my hair is white—it is the business. It is also thin—that is the business, too. It was all different when I was young. We had not many kinds of shoes, only a few sizes, and just two different widths. Now there are hundreds of styles of shoes—sixteen sizes and eight widths, and you have to try them all on the same woman sometimes to please her. When I was young a woman put on her own shoes with little help. Now we have to take off the old shoes, button all the twenty-five or thirty pairs of new ones we try on, tell all sorts of stories about the sizes, be careful indeed not to hurt the bunions and corns that we must pretend not to see, put the old shoes back on and the rubbers, pick up the bundles, help the women to the door, and close it after her. If women would wear the size shoe they need I would like it better, but they won't if they know it. Do you know what a large 4½ shoe is? Well, now, I will tell you in confidence—it is a 7. When a woman asks for that kind of a shoe I mark the number from a pair of 7's, fit it on her feet, and she goes away delighted. But three-fourths of the ladies have too small shoes. I stand by my door Sunday and watch the pretty girls go by to church. They are sweet, bright-eyed, red-cheeked and straight-limbed. God made them good—but they can't walk in a straight line; they go dipping and dodging all over the walk in crooked paths, like the wicked the Bible tells about. Why is that? They are looking for soft stones in the walk—smooth places—because their feet hurt so badly. They can not step square and stand on the curbstone, and they dread to put the foot down on the crosswalk.

"We have to fit the head and the foot, too, when we sell a shoe. The head says 'No. 3, AA,'; the foot says a '5 EE'—we can't fit both with the same shoe."

"Are girls or married ladies most particular about their shoes?"

"O, girls will wear small shoes any way, but often a married lady comes in and says: 'I wore a No. 3 shoe before I was married, but now my market is made I will be comfortable,' and we sell her a five. The first vanity an elderly woman gives up is her pride about small shoes. To the day of her death her bonnet must be becoming, her dress must fit nicely, her glove be neat, but she will say of her shoe: 'Give me some thing easy.' You see she has spoiled her feet in her youth, and now she must do penance with twisted toes and three-cornered joints.

"Women are much harder to fit than men, but when a man is a crank he is the worst kind of a one. Dudes are the worst of all to deal with. They don't know what they do want.

"A woman came in one day and asked if we had 'kidneys.' I showed her kid boots and it was all right. Another asked for 'oxen tise, and another for 'paper goat,' and they all, without exception, wanted shoes too short. I never knew a woman to ask for long enough shoes unless she was very old.

"The largest size I sell is a No. 10, and the girls that wear those shoes have brains and breeding enough to ask for that size, and not make me try on every number from six up; but we have several customers who have a nine shoe, and we dare not tell them; they would never try it; so we mark it a six."

"It is thirty-one years ago to-day since I became a shoemaker," said Mr. Alexander, "and I think no article of wearing apparel has improved more than the fashion and shape of shoes. Here is a case of shoes which was manufactured in New York and received a medal at the Crystal Palace, London, just before it burned, some time in the fifties. The most stylish street shoe then was a low, heelless gaiter, laced on the inside of the foot, made of cloth of all colors, from the most delicate lavender to a seal brown, with or without a narrow foxing of patent leather scarcely half an inch wide. The delicate shades of blue, pink and lavender were the most popular street shoes, while for the house tinted satin shoes embroidered with a vine in bright, soft shades, or in plain colors, were selected by women of fashion. Slippers had no heels, and were held in place by ribbons crossed and strapped round and round the ankle. The soles of these shoes were straight and narrow, having no arch at the instep, the tops cut like a congress gaiter, with no vamp, reaching only to the bend of the ankle, and bordered with lace frills or silk fringe with tassels. One pair of buttoned shoes was displayed so low that five buttons fastened it—the buttons being of brass, the shoe itself of pale gray cloth, foxed narrowly with patent leather, with three tiny straps of the leather ornamenting the toe. Another favorite style was in the Jenny Lind buckskin, a low shoe cut all in one piece, with a seam in the back and no heel. There were also street shoes worn with light hose. These shoes were all made and stitched by hand. One clerk could wait on half a dozen ladies at once in those days, as they put the shoes on themselves and we had only two widths and few varieties. If a shoe was too narrow a lady took the next size larger; if that was too narrow she took the next size still. Of course it was too long, but we filled the toe with cotton batting, and it was perfectly satisfactory.

There lived in Beaford County, Va., a family by the name of D., consisting of the elder D., two old maid daughters and D., Jr. It was the year 1872. The father was quite old; his son (of whom I speak) already had charge of the farm. He was one of those "this land is posted" "beware of trespassing" sort of farmers, so much so that his neighbors would have nothing to do with him; he was so hated by neighboring farmers that when D—, Sr., was taken very ill no one in the immediate vicinity responded to the call for aid in nursing the sick. A Mr. H—, residing some distance away, hearing of the serious illness of Mr. D—, Sr., went at once to the sick man's bedside and attended his wants day and night for a fortnight, when he (the old man) went the way of all flesh. A few days after the sad event Mr. H— was presented a bill by D—, Jr., for fifteen dollars, for two weeks, board while attending his dying father, which was paid without a word.

5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

H. M. YERINGTON dropped into the National Bank building last evening and entered his protest to Regent Fish against the spending $15,000 or $20,000 for a dormitory building at the University. Mr. Yerington takes the ground that it would be better to build a building that would meet the requirements of the University—that is, an assembly room—and not spend anything for a dormitory until the demands are greater than at present. He said that the cramped condition of the State's finances would not justify the outlay just now. Regent Fish got a little excited and allowed himself to make a statement that would be hard for him to prove. He said that he had explained to the newspapers, but that they did not want to understand the proposition. He said that $500 was all that was required to partition off rooms in the building for dormitory purposes. We think the press of the State has the good of the University at heart and we do not believe that they would throw a stone in the way of its success.

We have taken the stand that the University needs a dormitory no more than a wagon needs five wheels, and we have arrived at that conclusion after careful inquiry and personal observation, and have just as much right to express our opinion as any other citizen. We cannot see that the University needs a $20,000 building at this time and have said so, and we think a very large majority of the taxpayers will bear us out in the statement. We do not propose to in any way dictate to the Hon. Board of Regents as to what they shall or shall not do, but admonish them to look well into the needs of the institution and not make any mistakes.

THE oldest bank notes are the "flying money" or "convenient money," first issued in China 2,797 B. C. Originally the notes were issued by the treasury, but experience dictated a change to the banks under Government inspection and control.

JAMES REDPATH says the continuation of the rent agitation in Ireland has had the effect of causing a reduction of the rents of that island at least $25,000,000.

An Expression of Delight.

"About a week ago," says a Los Angeles, Cal., druggist, "a Chinaman came in with a lame shoulder. I sold him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and guaranteed that it would cure him. He came in again last night, and as soon as he got inside the door began to swing his arms over his head like an Indian club swinger. I thought the blamed fool had a fit, but he finally stopped long enough to say: "Medicine velly fine, velly fine; allie same make me feel plenty good." Chamberlain's Pain Balm is without an equal for sprains, rheumatism, aches, pains or lame back. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

In Three Days.

Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism, but it can be done, if the proper treatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert of New Brunswick, Ills.: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right today; and I would urge on everyone who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once." For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

Oregon is one of the most productive States in the Union. Its vast mineral regions contain gold, silver, copper, iron and coal. Its immense tracts of grazing lands support thousands of cattle and sheep, and its extensive agricultural regions produce all the cereals in abundance, the yield per acre being, in some instances, the largest in the world. Among the useful and valuable products of the Webfoot State may be mentioned Oregon Kidney Tea, which has proved a boon to thousands afflicted with pain in the back and kidney difficulties. It is purely of vegetable composition and never fails. Sold by William Pinniger.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCHES TO THE GAZETTE.]

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 3.—The dark disaster of the day with its attending terrors has thrilled the universe and drawn the two continents closer together in bonds of sympathy. The midnight terrors of Ashtabula and Chatsworth evoked tears of pity from every fireside in Christendom, but the true story of Johnstown, when all is known, will stand solitary and alone as the acme of man's annihilation by the potent forces to which humanity is ever subject. Menacing clouds hover darkly over the valley of death, and the muttering thunder that ever and anon reverberates in the distance seems a sardonic chuckle of the demon of destruction. But the modern deluge has done its worst for Johnstown; the waters are rapidly subsiding, but the angry torrent still eddies around the scene of destruction, and the time has not yet arrived to tell the pathetic tale of the devastation of "Black Friday." It is not a hackneyed utterance to say that no pen can adequately depict the horrors of this city's twin disasters—the holocaust and deluge.

The deep emotions that will form a part of every spectator will find the most eloquent expression in silence—the silence that speaks man's recognition of his subservance to the elements and his impotence to avert catastrophe.

The morning opens dark and dreary. Great drops of rain fall occasionally, and another storm seems imminent. Everyone feels thankful though, that the weather still remains cool and that the gradual putrification of hundreds of bodies that still lie in the stream and lie pinned under miles of driftwood and debris is not unduly hastened. This morning the peculiar stench of decaying human flesh is plainly perceptible to the senses of one ascending the banks of the stony creek for half a mile along the smoldering ruins of the wreck, and the most sceptical can now conceive the worst and realize that perhaps thousands of bodies lie charred and blackened beneath this great funeral pyre.

The searchers wander wearily over the smoking mass and occasionally a sudden shout comes over the waters to the patient watchers on the hill who realize that another ghastly discovery has been added to the long list of revelations that chill every heart and draw tears to the eyes of pessimists. From the banks many charred remains of the victims of the flame and flood are plainly visible as the receding water reluctantly gives up its dead. Beneath almost every log or blackened beam, a glistening skull or the bleached remains of ribs or limbs mark all that remains of life's hopes and dreams.

Since ten o'clock last night the fire engines have been busy, water has been constantly playing upon the burning ruins. At times the fire would seem almost extinguished, but the frightful flames would suddenly break out afresh in new quarters, and again the water and flames wage a fierce combat. The chief sensation of the morning has been the united remonstration of physicians against the extinguishing of the burning wreck. They maintain with a philosophy, that to the anxious searchers it may seem heartless, but hundreds if not thousands of lifeless decaying bodies lie beneath this mass of burning ruins, and that it would be better to permit nature's greatest scavenger—the flames—to pursue its work unmolested.

There can be but one result—days will elapse before the rubbish can be sufficiently removed to permit the recovery of these bodies, and long ere that every corpse will be a putrid mass, yielding forth those frightful emanations of decaying human flesh, that in a crowded community like this can give but one result—dreadful typhoid.

Every battle-field has demonstrated the necessity of the hasty interment of the decaying bodies, and the stench that already arises is a forerunner of the impending danger.

"Burn the wreck! Burn the wreck!" A loud cry of indignation arose from the lips of the vast multitude, and the warnings of science were lost in the eager demands of those who sought the remains of the near and dear. The hose was again turned upon the hissing mass and rapidly the flames yielded to the supremacy of water.

It is almost impossible to conceive the extent of the smoking ruins. The area of eight or ten acres above the dam is covered to the depth of eighty feet with shattered houses borne from the neighborhood of Johnstown, and in each of these houses it is estimated there are from one to twenty-five people. This is accepted as a data upon which to estimate the number who perished upon this spot, and if the data be correct the bodies that lie beneath must run well up into the hundreds, if not thousands.

There is no telling how many bodies have been lost. Adjutant-General Hastings, who has charge of everything, stated this morning that he supposed there was at least 2,000 people under the burning debris, but the only way to find out how many lives were lost was to take a census of the people now living and subtract that from the census before the flood. Said he: "In my opinion there are at least between 4,000 and 8,000 souls lost."

Battery B., of Pittsburg, arrived here this morning. They were sent by the Chamber of Commerce, but Adjutant-General Hastings ordered them back because the Chamber of Commerce had no authority to send them.

PITTSBURG, June 3.—A. J. Moxham, president of the relief committee, has arranged storage and a distribution system for the relief fund, and articles can be sent directly to Johnstown.

JOHNSTOWN, June 3.—A train of five cars is in from Cumbarland, Md., this morning loaded with provisions, and thirty men to help clean up the debris.

JOHNSTOWN, June 3.—The Sheriff has taken charge of Johnstown this morning and armed men are patrolling the streets. The Deputy Sheriff shot two Hungarians for robbing bodies. The people who have been properly in the limit are permitted to enter the city, but otherwise it is impossible to get into the town. The relief committee from Ohio is pitching tents on the inside; nine hundred of these are here and are being utilized as fast as erected. For the first time since the flood men have been put to work on the debris near the bridge. This morning the bodies of men, women and children were taken from the ruins. A child was clasped in the arms of a woman and the trio were evidently husband, wife and child. The most distressing sight is to see the relatives of people who are supposed to be lost standing around watching every body as it is pulled out—they are more like maniacs than sensible people.

Relief trains from Pittsburg reached here at two o'clock this morning. All along the road at each town contributions were made, and when Johnstown was reached the train had ten loaded cars.

The town is under martial law; everyone who goes about the place is challenged and required to give an account of himself. The full extent of the disaster is only being ascertained now. The latest estimates put the loss of life at from 10,000 to 12,000. It is impossible to get any accounts of the lost. Everyone is so thoroughly tired out and overcome by the weight of the disaster as to be utterly unable to give any accurate details or figures. Comparatively few have been identified.

Frank McDonald, a conductor on the Baltimore & Ohio, was at the Pennsylvania depot when the flood come. He said when he first saw the flood it was thirty feet high and rose to at least eighty feet. There is no doubt that the South Fork dam broke said McDonald. Fifteen minutes before the flood came Decker, the Pennsylvania railroad agent, read me a telegram just received, saying the South Fork dam had broken. As soon as he read this, the people in the station, numbering 200, made a rush for the hills. I certainly think I saw 1,000 bodies go over the bridge. The first house that came down struck the bridge and at once took fire. As fast as others came down they were consumed. I believe I am safe in saying I saw a thousand bodies burned. From under the large brick school house 128 bodies were taken last night, and to-day in every corner and place bodies are being found and buried as fast as possible. The necessity for speedy burial is manifest, for the stench arising is sickening. A number of bodies have been found with bullet holes in them, showing that in their maddening fright suicide was resorted to by many.

The first man from the dam at South Fork has just arrived. The dam burst open in the center, in a broad break. A nameless Paul Reviere, somewhere among the nameless dead, and who he is may never be known, but his ride will be famous in local history, mounted on a grand deep bay horse, came riding down the pike which passes through Conemaugh to Johnstown, like some angel of wrath of old, shouting his portentious warning of "Run for your lives to the hills; run to the hills!" The people crowded out of their houses along the thickly settled streets awe-stricken and wondering. No one knew the man, and some thought he was a maniac and laughed, but on at a deadly pace rode this man, still ringing out his awful cries. In a few moments, however, there came a cloud of ruin down the streets, down the narrow allies, grinding, twisting, hurling, overturning, crashing and annihilating the weak and strong alike. It was the charge of the flood, wearing its coronet of ruin and devastation, and it grew every instant of its progress. Forty feet high, some say, and others thirty, was this sea.

11:20 A. M.—Four gentlemen, relatives of members of the South Fork fishing club, who had gone to learn the fate of their friends at the lake, have just returned. They report no one at the lake except custodians and some workmen. The dam broke in the center at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon and at 4 the lake was dry. That great body of water passed out in an hour. An effort was made to avert this disaster by digging a sluiceway on one side to ease the pressure on the dam, but without avail. The water passed over the dam about a foot above its top, beginning at half-past two. Whatever occurred in the way of a cloudburst took place during the night. There had been but little rain up to the flood, and in the morning when the workmen awoke the lake was full and kept on rising rapidly until at two o'clock it began pouring over the dam and undermining it.

Men were sent three or four times during the day to warn the people. When the final break came there was a sound like tremendous and continued peals of thunder; trees, rocks and earth shot into mid-air in great columns, and then the wave started down the ravine. The whole south fork was swept, with not a tree standing. Rescuing parties are at work on the mass of unburned wreckage in the river, finding bodies and fragments at the rate of ten to fifteen an hour, and in other parts of the submerged districts many bodies are being taken out. A careful estimate at this time of the bodies recovered everywhere puts it at from seven hundred to eight hundred, and the total loss of life is certainly from six thousand to eight thousand.

JOHNSTOWN, June 3.—A cold wave has struck the town and people are badly in need of clothing. An exciting scene took place in Johnstown last night. A Hungarian was discovered in the act of blowing up a safe in the First National Bank. The man was strung up to a tree by a vigilance committee and his body filled with bullets. The body remained hanging for several hours.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Two spans of Long Bridge, crossing the Potomac river, have been carried away by the flood.

HARRISBURG, June 1. — General Hastings telegraphed the following to the managers of the telegraph company of this city: You had better inform Governor Beaver that this morning's report gave the number lost at Johnstown at between 12,000 and 15,000. The greatest disorder prevails. The place is infested with thieves and vandals who are robbing the dead and appropriating everything they can lay their hands on. These people are eating almost eveything in the shape of provisions sent here for the flood sufferers.

Words of Sympathy from England.

LONDON, June 3.—The Daily News, in discussing the danger of artificial lakes, says: "America, where everything is on the scale of vastness which we cannot experience, seems destined to suffer calamities of civilization as it exhibits triumphs on the most collosal scale. The sympathy of the whole civilized world will be with the people of Pensylvania in the saddest and most striking and most overwhelming misfortune that ever befell the people of the English race." The other morning dailies refer to the disaster in a similar strain.

A Heavy Rain in England.

LONDON, June 3.—Heavy storms of rain and lightning have occurred in the midlands of England. The lower part of Liverpool is under water. The bank building at Preston was struck by lightning. Numerous accidents are reported from other places.

The Samoan Conference.

BERLIN, June 3.—It is expected that the protocol drawn up by the Samoan Conference will be signed on the 8th inst. The American Commission is making preparations to leave for home.

The Commissioners deferred action on the fire-limit ordinance to-day until Wednesday next.

MORE ABOUT THE DORMITORY.

What Members of the Last Legislature Have to Say.

The following letters, in answer to the GAZETTE circular sent out a few days since, have been received. Senator Millett writes as follows:

JUNCTION, Nye Co., May 24, 1889.

Yours of the 21st inst. at hand, and I will endeavor to answer your inquiries to the best of my recollection.

Was the matter of a dormitory considered by the Legislature? Yes.

Do you consider it wise to put $15,000 or $20,000 into such a building? From what your Reno people represented to the Legislature I was led to believe that it was a necessity, as the Regents, President and all the Reno people that appealed to us for the appropriation of the money told us that a great many people wished to send their children to the University, but would not do so for the reason that there was no one responsible for them between the hours of closing and opening school, and Senator Comins said he had children which he would send to the University, except for the above reason, who were at the time attending the Whitaker school. I personally am willing to leave the matter to the Board of Regents for them to act as they deem to the best interests of the University.

In answer to the third question I will say that I do not know of any one who intends sending their children to the University from this county, and the fourth question I have already answered. Respectfully,

A. B. MILLETT.

P. S.—In consideration of the question further, I think the $15,000 or $20,000 may be used to better advantage than in building a dormitory.

MILLETT.

What Hon. R. A. Riepe has to say:

ELY, Nev., May 27.

I received yours of the 21st inst. and contents noted. In return I will answer as near as I possibly can. I am opposed to spending money faster than we are able. My vote shows it from the beginning of the last session of the Legislature to the very last day. I believe in education, but I am opposed to spending such a sum for such a purpose. We had better wait a few years yet, and build this State institution of learning up first-class. Then, if we have a number who require such a building, it is plenty of time to build one.

It would not be a surprise to me to see this dormitory empty after it is built, because I think it is a detriment at the present time to us. Instead of using $15,000 or $20,000 for such a building it would be more in keeping to spend it for a more beneficial use. I assure you that this dormitory question was not well considered by the last Legislature. As far as my county is concerned, our people will send their children to the University anyway, without having this building. I don't consider it a necessity, and no other sensible man does at the present time. Truly yours, R. A. RIEPE.

A letter from Hon. D. V. Johnston of Elko:

DEETH, Nev., May 26, 1889.

Your circular of May 21st is at hand. In answer to your first question, I will say that the building of a dormitory may have been incidentally mentioned, but it was not considered as one of the purposes for which the appropriation was made, as a dormitory is not mentioned in the Act making the appropriation. My understanding of the matter at the time was that $30,000 of the money was to be used for the maintenance of the University, and the balance of the appropriation was to be used in making additions to its room capacity and for improving and caring for the grounds.

I think that the building of a dormitory should be deferred for a couple of years at least, for if the present appropriation is not justly and wisely expended, my opinion is that there will be great difficulty in getting liberal appropriations in the future.

I do not know of any one that would send pupils to the University in case a dormitory was built who would not do so without.

I have not heard any one say that they thought it necessary to build a dormitory at present.

D. V. JOHNSTON.

What Senator Sawyer says:

PIOCHE, Nev., May 26, 1889.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 21st at hand and carefully noted. In reply to the questions propounded therein I will say:

First. The matter of a dormitory for the State University was fully considered by the Legislature, or at least the Senate, and one of the main arguments advanced for the increased appropriation was the necessity for a dormitory for the reasons, as alleged, that (1) the students could not be quartered in desirable private families, and (2) the faculty could not have that control over the students which they deemed desirable, if they boarded and lodged away from the institution.

Second. According to the arguments advanced as hereinbefore stated, it would, in my estimation, be wise to build a dormitory.

Third. Your third question I cannot answer desirably, but I am convinced that if parents and guardians were satisfied that the faculty would have the supervision of the physical and moral well-being of the students, as well as of their technical education, many more students would be sent to the University from all parts of the State.

Fourth. The preceding answer is also an answer to your fourth question.

In conclusion, I would say that I am not conversant with the status and needs of the University, but assume that the Regents are.

The object of maintaining the University, however, is the giving to the youth of the State better facilities than are offered elsewhere for obtaining a higher education than the common schools afford; and if this end cannot be attained, it is useless to appropriate the people's money to preserve the name of a nonenity. Yours respectfully, GEO. S. SAWYER.

A letter from Senator La Grave:

WINNEMUCCA, May 31, 1889.

Your circular of the 21st inst. came to hand in due time and should have been answered before this, but have been very busy, hence the delay.

No. 1. The question of a dormitory at the State University was discussed in the State Senate; am not sure about the Assembly.

No. 2. Yes (if properly expended). I believe the amount spoken of by the Regents and those who proposed the plan of a dormitory was $18,000.

No. 3. I believe there are several, but only know of one.

No. 4. I believe it a necessity.

There has been so little talk here in regard to the University that I am unable to give more than my individual opinion in answer to Nos. 3 and 4. Yours truly. CHAS. A. LAGRAVE.

What White Pine's Senator has to offer:

ELY, Nev., May 30, 1889.

Your circular, in reply: The necessity of a dormitory, as I now remember, was most persistently urged by President Brown, the Washoe Senators and everyone else from Reno at all times.

It was most emphatically declared to the members of the late Legislature that the people of Reno could not accommodate the students from abroad.

Who ever heard of a school boarding-house or dormitory being monotonous? In earlier times they were usually too lively for the peace of mind of the presiding professor.

2d. No opinion at this time.

White Pine county will send very few, if any, children to the State University for years to come. Certainly not until Reno can furnish as good or better accommodations than is now to be had at Salt Lake City. The latter town is more accessible to Eastern Nevada.

Do you know of any one who considers it a necessity? Not outside of the town of Reno. Yours truly,

H. A. COMINS.

H. H. Coryell answers no to all the questions, but one.

Was the matter of a dormitory considered by the Legislature? Yes.

Do you consider it wise to put $15,000 or $20,000 into such a building? No.

Do you know of anyone in your county who will send pupils to the University in case a dormitory is built who will not do so without? No.

Do you know of anyone who considers it a necessity? No.

He adds:

WELLS, Nev., May 31, 1889.

I think there are better ways of using the school money than putting up a dormitory.

There was some talk in the Legislature about a dormitory, but I believe it was not fully understood that this money was to be used for that purpose. Yours respectfully,

H. H. CORYELL.

Hon. Lem Allen of Churchill says:

Was the matter of a dormitory considered in the Legislature? No.

Do you consider it wise to put $15,000 or $20,000 into such a building? No.

Do you know of anyone in your county who will send pupils to the University in case a dormitory is built who will not do so without? No.

Do you know of anyone who considers it a necessity? No.

Hon. A. Garrard says:

Was the matter of a dormitory considered by the Legislature? Yes.

Do you consider it wise to put $15,000 or $20,000 into such a building? Yes.

Do you know of anyone in your county who will send pupils to the University in case a dormitory is built who will not do so without? Yes.

Do you know of anyone who considers it a necessity? I do.

A voice from Humboldt.

LOVELOCK, June 2, 1889.

SIR: In reply to your questions concerning University matters, I will say in regard to the first question that Judge Wells explained on the floor of the Assembly the necessity of additional school facilities, including a dormitory, I believe. The Legislature passed the appropriations of money depending on the Regents to use it where it will do the most good. I do not think it would be a wise move to spend $15,000 or $20,000 of that money just now for a dormitory. To the other two questions I can answer no. Respectfully, NELS NELSON.

J. P. As they crossed the State line, Mr. Foulks, who is the General Manager of the line, regrets that the restrictions of the interstate commerce law will not allow him to give free passes over his road.

Well Attended.

The dairy maid festival at the residence of J. S. Shoemaker Saturday night was a very enjoyable affair. The yard was illuminated with Chinese lanterns and tables set all over the grounds, which presented a picturesque and beautiful appearance. The gypsy tent, presided over by Mrs. King, was much sought, after which the ice cream, flower and candy tables were well patronized. The ladies cleared about $65.

HE SENT IT EAST.

For a year I was troubled with pains in my back and side, and headaches, the result of liver and kidney trouble. I was attracted to Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla by the startling testimonials in the papers and which seemed so practical I was induced to try it, knowing that as it was purely vegetable, it would at any rate do no harm. It acted as a gentle laxative and after the second bottle my pains and aches disappeared and I felt like a new man. It did so much for me that I sent several bottles to my family in New Jersey, who also took it with the most satisfactory results.

TRUCKEE TRIUMPHANT.

If the band that accompanied the baseball excursion yesterday did not play "See, the Conquering Hero Comes" as they landed at Truckee they probably wanted to, but, in returning to Reno, they could very properly change the air to "We've Been There Before Many a Time, Many a Time." The band, by the way, was highly praised for the excellent music discoursed.

The ball game was a very good one, and both clubs were on their mettle. While Reno was defeated, still as a club they did better all-round work than their opponents. Johnson, the pitcher for the Truckeeites, is a wonderful man in the box, and struck out sixteen of the visitors, the usually safe batter Ferguson slicing the air at random. He had the best of support behind the bat in Land, who gets the ball to first, second and third in quick order.

Game was called at 2 o'clock, with Murray at the bat for the Renos. He hit safe to first, took second on balk of pitcher, and scored on Linn's safe hit to right. Donnelly flew out to third. Linn stole second and third, and crossed the plate on Wilson's safe hit, who scored on passed balls. Morton made first on a hit and muff by first baseman. Card made a safe hit, advancing Morton, who tallied on a passed ball. Card went to third on a passed ball and home on an overthrow. White ended the inning by fanning out.

In the first half of the second inning Ferguson went out on the line, Murray at first, Linn ditto.

Schultz fanned, Johnson made a three-bagger, Potter fanned, and White took in a fly of Winters'. Score, 5 to 0.

In the third inning Wilson got in a run for the visitors, but after this inning not a run was made.

The Truckecites passed two men over the home plate this inning and scored a tally in the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eight, defeating the Renos by a score of 8 to 6 with an inning to spare. Following is the score:

	TB	R		TB	R
Elsey, 3b	4	2	Murray, lf	4	1

Totals	38	8	Totals	33	6

Time of game—2 hours 10 minutes. Struck out—Johnston 16, Card 9. Umpire, James Morris. Scorer, Victor LaMotte.

NOTES.

Umpire Morris is voted a success.

The baseball season is now opened.

Centerfielder White yesterday done honor to himself.

Last Sunday's game is the best ever played in the Truckee Basin.

Pitcher Johnson of the Truckees, it is said, will soon play with the Stocktons.

The Truckee nine should note the rules of '89 relating to coaching, as they will be held down to the letter at a return game. No one but a runner can be coached.

Card eased up in his pitching after the third inning to accommodate his backstop Donnelly, who requested the cannon-ball tosser to be merciful. Card throws a swift ball, and Donnelly regrets that his hands would not allow him to give the support that would have kept the Truckee boys' score down.

GIRLS AND MARRIAGE.

They Should Not Go to the Altar Under Twenty-Five.

Early Marriages May Be Desirable for Young Men, But Not for School Girls Just Blossoming Into Womanhood—Some Sensible Views.

It must be generally conceded that the married state is that in which the greatest happiness is possible; and it might be inferred, then, that one could not enter it too early. But, says the Philadelphia Press, those who may recall the son of "Matthew" in "Pilgrim's Progress," who made himself ill by eating green apples—green apples which might have been wholesome and delicious had he waited until they were ripe—can recall an illustration quite contradictory of such inference.

Fortunate for him, as it may seem to the mother of a son, if her boy shall marry early, yet his instance is a singular one, if, on reaching something less than middle age, he has not dropped his wife so far behind him as to leave himself practically unmarried, having a nurse, a housekeeper, a humble friend possibly a slave, but certainly no companion, no wife, in the wide sense of the word. His early marrage may have been, superficially considered, an advantage to his morality, and so to his health; but when the mother has brought up her boy, as it is her duty to do, to understand that the same personal purity is required of him that is required of her girl, at whatever age, then the question of that morality will not enter into the affair at all.

But, however, the mother of a son may look at the subject of early marriages, the mother of a daughter is justified, it seems to me, in a rather decided opposition to them. If, instead of being a great and happy portion of the school of life, marriage constituted the whole of it, or life existed only for the sake of marriage, still those entering its portals must be the better for suitable preparation. I am unable to suppose that at the age of eighteen or twenty any preparation has been sufficient. The age is lovely in its tenderness, and enchanting with its illusions; but wisdom wears a severe face, and marriage deals with stern facts. Some girls there may be, of rare ability, who are competent to take upon their young shoulders the responsibility of a house, its work, or the direction of those who do its work; the oversight of a husband's wardrobe, the bearing and nursing of children, the physical attention to them in health and in sickness, and the daily direction of their moral and mental education, together with all the other in-door and out-door cares incidental to the position of one who is the head of a family, and who has the happiness of a home and a husband on her heart and conscience. But these cases are few and exceptional, and the great multitude of girls under twenty are not equal to such a strain upon nerve and muscle without an arrest of development. A few years later they may remember themselves at that age as still children; they may feel some reproach toward those who laid upon them then a burden greater than children should bear.

Before twenty a girl has hardly had the chance to receive the complete instruction from text-books to which she has a right, to say nothing of the domestic education of the kitchen, the needle, the sick room; she has had little chance to learn any thing of the world of human nature; she has intuitions, not experiences; she has lived more with dreams and ideals than with realities. She may make a charming wife at first, and a tender mother always, maternal instinct and solicitude taking the place of all the superiority that added years might have given. But she must stop there, taxed to the utmost; she has no time, nor strength, and, perhaps—as inclination grows by use—no inclination to read, to study, to keep pace with a husband's advance, or even to appreciate it. I will not say that when, in a few years, she has lost the appearance of youth, when she has no more fresh color and a smooth face, when a pretty toilet no longer becomes her, the husband who continues to cherish her will take credit to himself for doing so; but it is evident that she encounters the danger of this feeling on his part. Nor do I think it an argument worth mentioning that the woman early married is so molded and bent to her husband's will that clashing and incompatibility become impossible, because in marriage the rights and sacrifices should be mutual, and I will not so insult the husband as to suppose him unreasonable enough for this molding to be necessary, or selfish enough to wish thus to suppress individuality, unable to find pleasure himself in renunciation, or negligent of civilized, not to say Christian duty.

Charming wife and tender mother as she may be, however, it is not to be doubted that when her education is more thorough and her experience more extended she will be a nobler wife and a far better mother. She will have lost some softening trifle of the arrogance of youth; vanity, levity, love of admiration, will have been so chastened as not to play the part of death's heads at the feast; she will have learned self-sacrifice and forbearance; she will have acquired tact and discretion and the sacred art of silence; she will have become harmonious; and she will know how to order home as she did not know how before.

Her knowledge will have opened avenues and outlooks of which her family will have the advantage; her judgment will have ripened, her whole nature deepened; she will take life at a higher plane, and her husband and her children, her whole world and the generations to come, will have gained by the delay. If it were but for the sake of those generations to come, born of mothers full grown in mind as well as in body, the delay would be worth while.

A young mother, with her children about her, is often a lovely sight; but as lovely a sight in a different way, if not so touching and appealing, is the mother to whom a few added years have given an immense added leverage in the task of bringing her children up and lifting them to a higher level even than her own.

DUDE AND MARINER.

A Would-Be Wit from the Hub Is Made Sad by Jolly Jack Tar.

Ladies and gentlemen of leisure who enjoy making curiosity-prompted incursions into odd localities had better pause to take bearings sometimes ere they chaff all the apparently simple folk they meet. At the Charleston navy-yard the other day, says the Boston Record, a gentleman and two ladies went on board the receiving ship, and, as usual, were escorted over the ship. When they came to the row of cannous on one of the decks, the gentleman turned to the ancient mariner in charge, who had already answered several irrelevant questions, and quizzingly inquired, pointing to the cannon:

"What are these?"

"Pop-guns for shooting fleas," was the prompt reply.

The questioner, nonplused for a second or two, again returned to the charge.

"I suppose you make them here; how do you do it?" he persisted.

"Oh, first search for a round, vacant hole, and when we find it we take it up and pour hot iron around it," answered the tar, gravely.

The questioner, perceiving by this time that he was getting the worse of the chaffing, and that the ladies for whose benefit he was exerting his wit were growing uncomfortable, suddenly made up his mind to leave that sailor in undisturbed dignity over his own province.

A BLIND MAN'S SKILL.

He Runs a Store Without Help and Without Making Mistakes.

While in the employ of the New Jersey Southern railroad a few years ago Charles H. Fennimore, of Farmingdale, had the misfortune to lose the sight of one eye, the result of getting a hot cinder from the locomotive in it, says the New York Sun. About a year afterward, while working in a marl pit at Lower Squankum, he got a small sharp pebble in the other eye. He was taken to an infirmary in New York, where every effort was made to save the sight, but he became totally blind.

Revolving in his mind various projects for the support of his family, he determined to try keeping a country store. His friends endeavored to dissuade him from the undertaking, but he was resolute and opened a small store in Lower Squankum, three miles from Farmingdale. He soon showed an aptitude for the business, and accomplished things which seemed marvelous.

His dwelling-house is over a mile distant from his store. At first his little daughter regularly took him by the hand at morning and evening and conducted him to and from his occupation. A little later he said he could go alone, and has done so ever since. His method is to count the steps from the front of his house to his store, and he has experienced no difficulty in reaching both in safety. He locks and unlocks the door and opens and closes the shutters without assistance. His son sweeps out and dusts the store, but he expects soon to do this without assistance.

His sense of touch and memory are simply wonderful. Every sort of goods put up in packages is so arranged under his direction that he can deal out any thing in his stock that is called for. This he does by counting the steps from either end of the counter, and the number of shelves, beginning with number one at the bottom, and enumerating the dividing spaces from either end of the rows of shelving.

He weighs accurately any thing from a quarter of a pound of tea to twenty-five pounds of flour, being guided by touch in arranging the weights and the tipping of the scales.

His memory of voices is so sensitive that he has never been known to make a mistake in a person's name. As a test a stranger to him was sent to the store. He was a fair mimic, and endeavored to personate a man well known to Mr. Fennimore. He signally failed, the blind storekeeper interrupting him at once and saying: "I don't know who you are, but you are not George Brower."

Perhaps Mr. Fennimore's greatest evidence of an unfaltering and accurate memory is the facility with which he makes change. Every morning Mrs. Fennimore arranges his wallet for him. The $5 notes are placed in the bottom, the $2 notes in the middle, and the $1 notes on the top of the package. He always knows to a penny how much change he has in an ordinary shot bag, and can tell the instant he touches any piece the value which it represents. Thus equipped he is ready to give a customer change for a note or silver currency, and his accuracy in making change equals that of any merchant in all the country round. Tried one day with a $5 gold piece which was laid in his hand, he looked toward the owner of it as if he could see him, smiled, rang the coin upon the counter, and said: "This is a $5 gold piece; what did you wish to buy?"

He is expert at addition and subtraction, readily keeping in his mind a dozen articles and their price, and telling a customer the amount the moment the last article is served. He is pleased with his occupation, and has made his business a modest success.

ARTISTIC STOVES.

One of the Crying Needs of the Present Era of Civilization.

The idea is just suggested that an ornamental stove be put in the market, says the Danbury News. Not merely an ornamental article, but one that is artistic, one that will adorn as well as comfort the home circle. It is a good idea, and has our hearty support. In fact, we are anxious about it. The stove has no nobler friend than the editor of this paper—no one who has given it such careful, intelligent study—no one who has so faithfully tried to understand it. So we feel a peculiar right to speak out. The article from which we gather the suggestion says that there is no reason why there should not be a costly stove. We don't exactly understand what is meant by this. Every stove we have had any thing to do with was costly enough. But, perhaps the writer refers to the market price. If so, we coincide with him. Stoves have been made with a view to combine beauty and utility with economy. But we suppose the people are now ripe for a stove that will be an adornment without reference to the price—just as they feel in regard to pictures, vases, etc. An article in bronze and polished steel, with French plate micas, mahogany doors and German silver cornice, with an electroplated scuttle and a pearl-handled poker, would not be a bad idea. Such a stove, inclosed in a rosewood cabinet and dusted off twice a day by a team of ostriches hired expressly for that purpose, could not fail of elevating and ennobling the atmosphere of any home. Its artistic loveliness would render its removal unnecessary in the spring, and this of itself would save its cost in a very little time. But even should it have to be moved—what of it? No man with the least discernment of the beautiful in his nature would object to being bucked in the abdomen by a German silver cornice, or skinning his knuckles on a mahogany door, or even to plunging headlong over an electroplated scuttle—and as for sliding backward down an entire flight of stairs with so much of the chaste and beautiful in his arms at once, nothing would compare to it in the way of luxurious sensations.

Let us have an artistic stove, by all means, with alabaster boots to put against it.

THEIR FIRST BANANA.

Popsy and Dicky Pronounce the Dainty Fruit Bitterer Than Boneset.

A young couple, said to have come from the vicinity of Tunkhannock, Pa., caused considerable merriment on the street Saturday afternoon, writes the Binghamton (N. Y.) Republican. They were evidently on their bridal tour, and nothing was too good for Popsy and her enamored liege. They stopped at a fruit stand on Court street, and Popsy's fancy turned lightly from thoughts of love to a stalk of bananas swaying in the breeze. She signified a wish to know what the "queer-looking things" were, and the attentive male fraction of the matrimonial entity promptly button-holed the proprietor.

"What's them?" he demanded, pointing to the yellow fruit.

"Those are bananas," replied the dealer.

"Yes; they are considered very fine," was the reply.

Negotiations followed, and after a little dickering two were secured. The pair regarded their purchase with no little curiosity. A big buck-horn knife was brought from the depths of "Dicky's" pocket, and he proceeded to make a vigorous onslaught on his prize.

"What a awful big core they've got," returned Popsy, tearing off a part of the skin.

"The blame thing is pretty much all core," replied Dicky, casting a sidelong
